Admiralty-Office, September 10, 1799.

A Letter from Captain Sir Sidney Smith, of His Majeſty's Ship Tigre, to Evan Nepean, Eſq; Secretary to the Admiralty, with its Incloſures, of which the following are Copies, were Yeſterday received at this Office:

Copy of a Letter from Captain Sir William Sidney Smith, of His Majeſty's Ship Tigre, to Evan Nepean, Eſq; dated off Mount Lebanon, June 16, 1799.

SIR MORTON EDEN has forwarded a Duplicate of your Letter of the 4th May, informing me of the ſailing of the French Fleet from Breſt. I take for granted this Fleet is bound for theſe Seas to ſupport Buonaparte's Operations, not knowing that his Expedition to Syria has completely failed, as the incloſed Duplicates will inform their Lordſhips.

MY LORD, Tigre, Acre, May 9, 1799.

I Had the Honor to inform your Lordſhip by my Letter of the 2d Inſtant, that we were buſily employed completing Two Ravelins for the Reception of Cannon to flank the Enemy's neareſt Approaches, diſtant only Ten Yards from them. They were attacked that very Night, and almoſt every Night ſince, but the Enemy have each Time been repulſed with very conſiderable Loſs: the Enemy continued to batter in Breach with progreſſive Succeſs, and have Nine ſeveral Times attempted to ſtorm, but have as often been beaten back with immenſe Slaughter. Our beſt Mode of Defence has been frequent Sorties to keep them on the defenſive, and impede the Progreſs of their Covering Works. We have thus been in one continued Battle ever ſince the Beginning of the Siege, interrupted only at ſhort Intervals by the exceſſive Fatigue of every Individual on both Sides. We have been long anxiouſly looking for a Reinforcement, without which we could not expect to be able to keep the Place ſo long as we have. The Delay in its Arrival being occaſioned by Haſſan Bey's having originally received Orders to join me in Egypt, I was obliged to be very peremptory in the Repetition of my Orders for him to join me here; it was not however till the Evening of the Day before Yeſterday, the Fifty-firſt Day of the Siege, that his Fleet of Corvettes and Tranſports made its Appearance. The Approach of this additional Strength was the Signal to Buonaparte for a moſt vigorous and perſevering Aſſault, in Hopes to get Poſſeſſion of the Town before the Reinforcement to the Garriſon could diſembark.

The conſtant Fire of the Beſiegers was ſuddenly increaſed tenfold, our flanking Fire from a Float was, as uſual, plied to the utmoſt; but with leſs Effect than heretofore, as the Enemy had thrown up Epaulments and Traverſes of ſufficient Thickneſs to protect him from it. The Guns that could be worked to the greateſt Advantage were a French Braſs Eighteen-Pounder in the Light-Houſe Caſtle, manned from the Theſeus, under the Direction of Mr. Seroder, Maſter's Mate, and the laſt mounted Twenty-four Pounder in the North Ravelin, manned from the Tigre, under the Direction of Mr. Jones, Midſhipman. Theſe Guns being within Grape Diſtance of the Head of the attacking Column, added to the Turkiſh Muſquetry, did great Execution; and I take this Opportunity of recommending theſe Two Petty Officers, whoſe indefatigable Vigilance and Zeal merit my warmeſt Praiſe. The Tigre's Two Sixty-eight Pound Carronades, mounted in Two Germes lying in the Mole, and worked under the Direction of Mr. Bray, Carpenter of the Tigre, (one of the braveſt and moſt intelligent Men I ever ſerved with,) threw Shells into the Centre of this Column with evident Effect, and checked it conſiderably. Still, however, the Enemy gained Ground, and made a Lodgment in the Second Story of the North-Eaſt Tower; the upper Part being entirely battered down, and the Ruins in the Ditch forming the Aſcent by which they mounted. Daylight ſhewed us the French Standard on the outer Angle of the Tower. The Fire of the Beſieged was much ſlackened in compariſon to that of the Beſiegers, and our flanking Fire was become of leſs Effect, the Enemy having covered themſelves in this Lodgment and the Approach to it by Two Traverſes acroſs the Ditch, which they had conſtructed under the Fire that had been oppoſed to them during the Whole of the Night, and which were now ſeen compoſed of Sand Bags and the Bodies of their Dead built in with them, their Bayonets only being viſible above them. Haſſan Bey's Troops were in the Boats, though as yet but Half-way on Shore. This was a moſt critical Point of the Conteſt; and an Effort was neceſſary to preſerve the Place for a ſhort Time till their Arrival.

I accordingly landed the Boats at the Mole, and took the Crews up to the Breach armed with Pikes. The enthuſiaſtic Gratitude of the Turks, Men, Women, and Children, at Sight of ſuch a Reinforcement, at ſuch a Time, is not to be deſcribed.

Many Fugitives returned with us to the Breach, which we found defended by a few brave Turks, whoſe moſt deſtructive miſſile Weapons were heavy Stones, which, ſtriking the Aſſailants on the Head, overthrew the Foremoſt down the Slope, and impeded the Progreſs of the Reſt. A Succeſſion, however, aſcended to the Aſſault, the Heap of Ruins between the Two Parties ſerving as a Breaſtwork for both, the Muzzles of their Muſquets touching, and the Spear-Heads of the Standards locked. Gezza Pacha hearing the Engliſh were on the Breach quitted his Station, where, according to the ancient Turkiſh Cuſtom, he was firing to reward ſuch as ſhould bring him the Heads of the Enemy, and diſtributing Muſquet Cartridges with his own Hands. The energetic old Man coming behind us, pulled us down with Violence, ſaying, if any Harm happened to his Engliſh Friends all was loſt. This amicable Conteſt as to who ſhould defend the Breach, occaſioned a Ruſh of Turks to the Spot, and thus Time was gained for the Arrival of the firſt Body of Haſſan Bey's Troops. I had now to combat the Paſha's Repugnance to admitting any Troops but his Albanians into the Garden of his Seraglio, become a very important Poſt as occupying the Terre-plein of the Rampart. There was not above Two Hundred of the original Thouſand Albanians left alive. This was no Time for Debate, and I overruled his Objections by introducing the Chiffick Regiment of One Thouſand Men armed with Bayonets, diſciplined after the European Method under Sultan Selim's own Eye, and placed by his Imperial Majeſty's expreſs Commands at my Diſpoſal. The Garriſon, animated by the Appearance of ſuch a Reinforcement, was now all on Foot, and there being conſequently enough to defend the Breach, I propoſed to the Pacha to get rid of the Object of his Jealouſy, by opening his Gates to let them make a Sally and take the Aſſailants in Flank: he readily complied, and I gave Directions to the Colonel to get Poſſeſſion of the Enemy's third Parallel or neareſt Trench, and there fortify himſelf by ſhifting the Parapet outwards. This Order being clearly underſtood, the Gates were opened, and the Turks ruſhed out, but they were not equal to ſuch a Movement, and were driven back to the Town with Loſs. Mr. Bray, however, as uſual, protected the Town-Gate efficaciouſly with Grape from the Sixty-eight Pounders. The Sortie had this good Effect, that it obliged the Enemy to expoſe themſelves above their Parapets, ſo that our Flanking Fire brought down Numbers of them, and drew their Force from the Breach, ſo that the ſmall Number remaining on the Lodgment were killed or diſperſed by our few remaining Hand Grenades thrown by Mr. Savage, Midſhipman of the Theſeus. The Enemy began a new Breach by an inceſſant Fire directed to the Southward of the Lodgment; every Shot knocking down whole Sheets of a Wall much leſs ſolid than that of the Tower on which they had expended ſo much Time and Ammunition.

The Groupe of Generals and Aids-du-Camp which the Shells from the Sixty-eight Pounders had frequently diſperſed, was now re-aſſembled on Richard Cœur de Lion's Mount. Buonaparte was diſtinguiſhable in the Centre of a Semicircle; his Geſticulations indicated a Renewal of Attack, and his diſpatching an Aid-du-Camp to the Camp, ſhewed that he waited only for a Reinforcement. I gave Directions for Haſſan Bey's Ships to take their Station in the Shoal Water to the Southward, and made the Tigre's Signal to weigh, and join the Theſeus to the Northward. A little before Sunſet, a maſſive Column appeared advancing to the Breach with a ſolemn Step. The Paſha's Idea was not to defend the Brink this Time, but rather to let a certain Number of the Enemy in, and then cloſe with them, according to the Turkiſh Mode of War. The Column thus mounted the Breach unmoleſted, and deſcended from the Rampart into the Paſha's Garden, where, in a very few Minutes, the braveſt and moſt advanced among them lay headleſs Corpſes, the Sabre, with the Addition of a Dagger in the other Hand, proving more than a Match for the Bayonet; the Reſt retreated precipitately; and the Commanding Officer, who was ſeen manfully encouraging his Men to mount the Breach, and who we have ſince learnt to be General Laſne, was carried off, wounded by a Muſquet Shot. General Rombaud was killed. Much Confuſion aroſe in the Town from the actual Entry of the Enemy, it having been impoſſible, nay impolitic, to give previous Information to every Body of the Mode of Defence adopted, leſt the Enemy ſhould come to a Knowledge of it by means of their numerous Emiſſaries.

The Engliſh Uniform, which had hitherto ſerved as a rallying Point for the old Garriſon wherever it appeared, was now in the Duſk miſtaken for French, the newly-arrived Turks not diſtinguiſhing between One Hat and another in the Crowd, and thus many a ſevere Blow of a Sabre was parried by our Officers, among which Colonel Douglaſs, Mr. Ives, and Mr. Jones had nearly loſt their Lives, as they were forcing their Way through a Torrent of Fugitives. Calm was reſtored by the Paſha's Exertions, aided by Mr. Trotte, juſt arrived with Haſſan Bey, and thus the Conteſt of Twenty-five Hours ended, both Parties being ſo fatigued as to be unable to move.

Buonaparte will, no Doubt, renew the Attack, the Breach being, as above deſcribed, perfectly practicable for Fifty Men a-breaſt; indeed the Town is not nor ever has been defenſible according to the Rules of Art, but according to every other Rule it muſt and ſhall be defended, not that it is in itſelf worth defending, but we feel that it is by this Breach Buonaparte means to march to farther Conqueſts. 'Tis on the Iſſue of this Conflict that depends the Opinion of the Multitude of Spectators on the ſurrounding Hills, who wait only to ſee how it ends to join the Victor, and with ſuch a Reinforcement for the Execution of his known Projects, Conſtantinople and even Vienna muſt feel the Shock.

Be aſſured, my Lord, the magnitude of our Obligations does but encreaſe the Energy of our Efforts in the Attempt to diſcharge our Duty, and though we may, and probably ſhall be overpowered; I can venture to ſay that the French Army will be ſo much farther weakened before it prevails, as to be little able to profit by its dear-bought Victory.

I have the Honor to be, &c. &c. &c.

W. SIDNEY SMITH.

Rear-Admiral Lord Nelſon.

Tigre, at Anchor off Jaffa, May 30, 1799.

MY LORD,

THE Providence of Almighty God has been wonderfully manifeſted in the Defeat and precipitate Retreat of the French Army, the Means we had of oppoſing its gigantic Efforts againſt us being totally inadequate of themſelves to the Production of ſuch a Reſult. The Meaſure of their Iniquities ſeems to have been filled by the Maſſacre of the Turkiſh Priſoners at Jaffa in cool Blood Three Days after their Capture; and the Plain of Nazareth has been the Boundary of Buonaparte's extraordinary Career.

He raiſed the Siege of Acre on the 20th May, leaving all his heavy Artillery behind him, either buried or thrown into the Sea, where however it is viſible and can eaſily be weighed. The Circumſtances which led to this Event, ſubſequent to my laſt Diſpatch of the 9th Inſtant, are as follows:

Conceiving that the Ideas of the Syrians as to the ſuppoſed irreſiſtible Proweſs of theſe Invaders muſt be changed ſince they had witneſſed the Checks which the beſieging Army daily met with in their Operations before the Town of Acre, I wrote a circular Letter to the Princes and Chiefs of the Chriſtians of Mount Lebanon, and alſo to the Sheiks of the Druſes, recalling them to a Senſe of their Duty, and engaging them to cut off the Supplies from the French Camp. I ſent them at the ſame Time a Copy of Buonaparte's impious Proclamation, in which he boaſts of having overthrown all Chriſtian Eſtabliſhments, accompanied by a ſuitable Exhortation, calling upon them to chooſe between the Friendſhip of a Chriſtian Knight and that of an unprincipled Renegado. This Letter had all the Effect that I could desire. They immediately sent me Two Ambassadors, professing not only Friendship but Obedience; assuring me that in Proof of the latter they had sent out Parties to arrest such of the Mountaineers as should be found carrying Wine and Gunpowder to the French Camp, and placing Eighty Prisoners of this Description at my Disposal. I had thus the Satisfaction to find Buonaparte's Career further Northward effectually stopped by a warlike People inhabiting an impenetrable Country. General Kleber's Division had been sent Eastward towards the Fords of the Jordan, to oppose the Damascus Army; it was recalled from thence to take its Turn in the daily Efforts to mount the Breach at Acre, in which every other Division in Succession had failed, with the Loss of their bravest Men, and above Three-fourths of their Officers. It seems much was hoped from this Division, as it had by its Firmness, and the steady Front it opposed in the Form of a Hollow-Square, kept upwards of Ten Thousand Men in check during a whole Day in the Plain between Nazareth and Mount Tabor, till Buonaparte came with his Horse-Artillery and extricated these Troops, dispersing the Multitude of irregular Cavalry, by which they were completely surrounded.

The Turkish Chifflick Regiment having been censured for the ill Success of their Sally, and their Unsteadiness in the Attack of the Garden, made a fresh Sally the next Night, Soliman Aga the Lieutenant-Colonel, being determined to retrieve the Honour of the Regiment by the punctual Execution of the Orders I had given him to make himself Master of the Enemy's Third Parallel, and this he did most effectually; but the Impetuosity of a few carried them on to the Second Trench, where they lost some of their Standards, though they spiked Four Guns before their Retreat. Kleber's Division, instead of mounting the Breach according to Buonaparte's Intention, was thus obliged to spend its Time and its Strength in recovering these Works, in which it succeeded after a Conflict of Three Hours, leaving every Thing in statu quo except the Loss of Men, which was very considerable on both Sides. After this Failure the French Grenadiers absolutely refused to mount the Breach any more over the putrid Bodies of their unburied Companions, sacrificed in former Attacks by Buonaparte's Impatience and Precipitation, which led him to commit such palpable Errors as even Seamen could take Advantage of. He seemed to have no Principle of Action but that of pressing forward, and appeared to stick at nothing to obtain the Object of his Ambition, although it must be evident to every Body else that even if he succeeded to take the Town, the Fire of the Shipping must drive him out of it again in a short Time; however, the Knowledge the Garrison had of the inhuman Massacre at Jaffa, rendered them desperate in their personal Defence. Two Attempts to assassinate me in the Town having failed, recourse was had to a most flagrant Breach of every Law of Honour and of War. A Flag of Truce was sent into the Town by the Hand of an Arab Dervise with a Letter to the Pacha, proposing a Cessation of Arms for the Purpose of burying the dead Bodies, the Stench from which became intolerable, and threatened the Existence of every one of us on both Sides, many having died delirious within a few Hours after being seized with the first Symptoms of Infection. It was natural that we should gladly listen to this Proposition, and that we should consequently be off our Guard during the Conference. While the Answer was under Consideration, a Volley of Shot and Shells on a sudden announced an Assault, which, however, the Garrison was ready to receive, and the Assailants only contributed to increase the Number of the dead Bodies in question, to the eternal Disgrace of the General, who thus disloyally sacrificed them. I saved the Life of the Arab from the Effect of the Indignation of the Turks, and took him off to the Tigre with me, from whence I sent him back to the General, with a Message, which made the Army ashamed of having been exposed to such a merited Reproof. Subordination was now at an End, and all Hopes of Success having vanished, the Enemy had no Alternative left but a precipitate Retreat, which was put in Execution in the Night between the 20th and 21st Instant. I had above said, that the Battering Train of Artillery (except the Carriages, which where burnt) is now in our Hands, amounting to Twenty-three Pieces. The Howitzers and medium Twelve-Pounders, originally conveyed by Land with much Difficulty, and successfully employed to make the first Breach, were embarked in the Country Vessels at Jaffa, to be conveyed coastwise, together with the worst among the Two Thousand wounded, which embarrassed the March of the Army. This Operation was to be expected. I took care, therefore, to be between Jaffa and Damietta before the French Army could get as far as the former Place. The Vessels being hurried to Sea, without Seamen to navigate them, and the Wounded being in Want of every Necessary, even Water and Provisions, they steered strait to his Majesty's Ships, in full Confidence of receiving the Succours of Humanity, in which they were not disappointed. I have sent them on to Damietta, where they will receive such further Aid as their Situation requires, and which it was out of my Power to give so many. Their Expressions of Gratitude to us were mingled with Execrations on the Name of their General, who had, as they said, thus exposed them to Peril rather than fairly and honorably renew the Intercourse with the English, which he had broken off by a false and malicious Assertion, that I had intentionally exposed the former Prisoners to the Infection of the Plague. To the Honor of the French Army, be it said, this Assertion was not believed by them, and it thus recoiled on its Author. The Intention of it was evidently to do away the Effect which the Proclamation of the Porte began to make on the Soldiers, whose eager Hands were held above the Parapet of their Works to receive them when thrown from the Breach. He cannot plead Mis-information as his Excuse, his Aid de-Camp Mr. Lallemand having had free Intercourse with these Prisoners on board the Tigre when he came to treat about them; and having been ordered, though too late, not to repeat their Expressions of Contentment at the Prospect of going Home. It was evident to both Sides, that when a General had Recourse to such a shallow, and at the same Time to such a mean Artifice as a maliſious Falſehood, all better Reſources were at an End, and the Defection in his Army was conſequently increaſed to the higheſt Pitch. The utmoſt Diſorder has been manifeſted in the Retreat, and the whole Track between Acre and Gaza is ſtrewed with the dead Bodies of thoſe who have ſunk under Fatigue, or the Effect of ſlight Wounds; ſuch as could walk, unfortunately for them, not having been embarked. The Rowing Gun-Boats annoyed the Van Column of the retreating Army in its March along the Beach, and the Arabs haraſſed its Rear when it turned inland to avoid their Fire. We obſerved the Smoke of Muſquetry behind the Sand Hills from the Attack of a Party of them, which came down to our Boats and touched our Flag with every Token of Union and Reſpect. Iſmael Pacha, Governor of Jeruſalem, to whom Notice was ſent of Buonaparte's Preparation for Retreat, having entered this Town by Land at the ſame Time that we brought our Guns to bear on it by Sea, a Stop was put to the Maſſacre and Pillage already begun by the Nabluſians. The Engliſh Flag rehoiſted on the Conſul's Houſe (under which the Pacha met me) ſerves as an Aſylum for all religious and every Deſcription of the ſurviving Inhabitants. The Heaps of unburied Frenchmen lying on the Bodies of thoſe whom they maſſacreed Two Months ago, afford another Proof of Divine Juſtice, which has cauſed theſe Murderers to periſh by the Infection ariſing from their own atrocious Act. Seven poor Wretches are left alive in the Hoſpital, where they are protected, and ſhall be taken care of. We have had a moſt dangerous and painful Duty in diſembarking here to protect the Inhabitants, but it has been effectually done; and Iſmael Pacha deſerves every Credit for his humane Exertions and cordial Co-operation to that Effect. Two Thouſand Cavalry are juſt diſpatched to haraſs the French Rear, and I am in Hopes to overtake their Van in Time to profit by their Diſorder; but this will depend on the aſſembling of ſufficient Force, and on Exertions of which I am not abſolutely Maſter, though I do my utmoſt to give the neceſſary Impulſe, and a right Direction. I have every Confidence that the Officers and Men of the Three Ships under my Orders, who, in the Face of a moſt formidable Enemy, have fortified a Town that had not a ſingle heavy Gun mounted on the Land Side, and who have carried on all Intercourſe by Boats under a conſtant Fire of Muſquetry and Grape, will be able efficaciouſly to aſſiſt the Army in its future Operations. This Letter will be delivered to your Lordſhip by Lieutenant Canes, Firſt of the Tigre, whom I have judged worthy to command the Theſeus, as Captain, ever ſince the Death of my much lamented Friend and Coadjutor Captain Miller. I have taken Lieutenant England, Firſt of that Ship, to my Aſſiſtance in the Tigre, by whoſe Exertions, and thoſe of Lieutenant Summers and Mr. Atkinſon, together with the Bravery of the Reſt of the Officers and Men, that Ship was ſaved, though on Fire in Five Places at once, from a Depoſit of French Shells burſting on board her.

I have the Honor to be, &c. &c. &c.
